

Army, Chicago Police Linked to Terrorists

CHICAGO, April 12 (UPI)—
An Army intelligence unit, working with Chicago police, helped the terrorist activities of a right-wing group that preyed on anti-Vietnam war groups from 1969 through 1971, The Chicago Daily News reported today.

In a copyrighted story, the newspaper said the terrorists, "who were members of a now-defunct organization known as the Legion of Justice, beat, gassed and wreaked general havoc on members of groups opposed to the Vietnam war."

The Army unit, identified as the 113th Military Intelligence

Group, with headquarters in suburban Evanston, supplied the legion with tear gas, mace and electronic equipment in addition to money, the Daily News said, quoting "informants."

Electronics bugs were reported planted in the offices of the American Friends Service Committee, a Quaker group, and the Independent Voters of Illinois.

"Hits" included the Young Socialist Alliance and the office of a new left film group called Newsreel, both in Chicago.
